(Narrator):

“Amelia, come to dinner,” called Mother.

“I’ll be there in a few minutes. We are almost done fixing the car,” Amelia responded.

Amelia was very interested in everything mechanical. She was fascinated by cars.

“Mom, can we go to the fair?” asked Amelia eagerly.

“Sure, as soon as we finish our household chores,” replied her mother.

Amelia was 10 years old when she first saw an airplane at the Iowa State Fair. She studied car repair as a young girl, and when Amelia grew older, she worked as a volunteer nurse at the Toronto Spadina Military Hospital. During that time, she attended a flying exposition for the first time. She attended another air show a few years later and became interested in flying airplanes. Amelia looked toward the sky and thought to herself, “Someday I will be up there in the clouds flying.”

Later, Amelia took flying lessons. She was very proud when she earned her airplane pilot's license. Amelia Earhart became the first woman to pilot an airplane across the United States.
